Pain Fact of the Month

Patients, families, and healthcare providers should always work together to improve children's pain

Healthcare providers should work with families to make sure pain is managed in all children, including non-verbal babies and children

Pain must be assessed in all children with an acute or chronic condition

Children and their families must be asked and heard about how well their pain treatment is working

Children should be assessed for how well they can do their regular activities to see whether changes should be made to their treatment plan
